

ANGELA WATSON

FEWER THINGS, BETTER

THE COURAGE TO FOCUS ON WHAT MATTERS MOST

Table of Contents

Introduction: You can't do it all (and you don't have to try).....13

Belief #1: I am worthy of better & change is possible for me right now

1. Recognizing the true potential of your time..... 23

Time can be budgeted and invested instead of just spent

Plan to make time, not hope to find time

Do you REALLY value your own time (and insist others do, too)?

The courage to define your time for yourself

Your beliefs about time will teach people how to treat you

Question the “normal” way to use time

2. Understanding why it's hard for teachers to say no.....32

Women's Honor Code: Do it for the kids, no matter the cost

Reject the idea that working harder will prove your value

Release yourself from the martyr mentality

Change your identity of being overworked and underappreciated

Challenge the correlation between hours worked and effectiveness

3. Examining your stories about what “has to” be done.....43

If it's a priority, we find the time; if not, we find an excuse

Differentiate between work as a hobby and true work

Debunk the myth that you can't take anything off your plate

Reframe obligations so that how you spend your time is a choice

The power of “I choose to” instead of “I have to”

What would happen if you DIDN'T do it?

Be quietly subversive when you feel like your hands are tied

Belief #2: I set my own expectations in life and in teaching

4. Questioning norms in school culture.....65

Who said it has to be done that way?

Find more efficient and effective ways to meet the requirements

Brainstorm alternatives to school norms

3 ways to respond to school norms you dislike

Avoid being labeled “the angry teacher” by showing up with solutions

How privilege and reputation can be used to disrupt the status quo

Lead colleagues toward change and support those who speak up

Resist the “school family” manipulation

Dismantle the false “team player” obligations

Break the barrel instead of pulling each other down

Stop holding in resentment until you just burnout

5. Overcoming self-doubt & developing confidence in your teaching... 97

Root out imposter syndrome

Recognize the value you bring to your work each day

Counter the feelings of not being or doing “enough”

Let go of “one right way” pressure and let your identity evolve

Allow other teachers to inspire you instead of comparing yourself

Self-reflect to find an approach in “the green zone”

Choose an accountability partner to help you grow your confidence

6. Defining expectations and creating healthy boundaries.....117

Redefine “normal” in a way that works for YOU

Notice how judgment keeps you from seeing new possibilities

How to figure out what you want more (and less of) in your life

Winners DO quit; they just quit the right things at the right time

Create boundaries, not ultimatums

When creating boundaries exacts too high a price

Accept the indignities of teaching for the love of the work

Belief #3: I know what's important and allocate time accordingly

7. Aligning time with priorities to build a true legacy.....143

What do you want your legacy to be?

How to build a legacy in your current season

Identify the daily habits that contribute to your legacy

You don't have to give the most time to your biggest priorities

5 steps to aligning daily life with your priorities

How to reduce time spent on low priorities to make time for higher ones

"I don't know how to prioritize" means "I'm not clear on what I want."

8. Making time for what matters and letting go of the rest.....163

Plan, then execute — not both at the same time

Prioritize tasks with a list-making system

Use the 4-question test to help you eliminate tasks

Create a buffer day for life's little annoyances

Decide how to eliminate the tasks you repeatedly put off

Use small blocks of time with intentionality

9. Eliminating the unnecessary from class time.....181

Plan your lessons for a realistic (rather than ideal) day

Streamline elements of the school day that waste time

Eliminate good learning activities to make time for the best

"Kill your darlings" when everything doesn't fit

Resist the urge to reinvent the wheel and chase shiny objects

Belief #4: I ensure my needs are met to prevent overwhelm and exhaustion

10. Releasing yourself from perfectionism & unnecessary work.....207

Look for "third rails" that over-complicate and add stress

Notice when fear and "what ifs" guide your decision making

Avoid superhero syndrome

Let go of the guilt about asking (and paying) for help

Stop project managing every aspect of home and work

Create a self-running classroom by giving kids more responsibility

Relax your standards for things no one else will notice

What would it look like if it were easy?

Start with the minimum viable product (MVP)

Every YES means a NO to something else

11. Getting clarity through practices of rest and recharging.....236

Time you enjoy wasting is never wasted

Shift your self-worth away from accomplishments

The myth of giving 110% and "doing whatever it takes"

Know and respect your own limits each day

Understand how to replenish your energy levels

Stop feeling frazzled by reducing stimulus and seeking out silence

12. Restoring balance and incorporating daily self-care habits.....254

Figure out what work/life balance looks like for you

Identify your "Core 5" for balance and well-being

How to monitor and adjust your Core 5 to live in balance Essential self-care practices to help you stay balanced

What makes a self-care practice "essential"?

How to build small habits and rituals of self-care into your day

Tune into your needs without judgment or "shoulds"

Afterword: Living the fewer things better way.....273